I was born and raised in the Silicon Valley I've seen massive chemical dumping out the back doors of technology companies into the creeks behind their businesses in the 80s. I have also worked for a Bay Area city water/sewer department and know that millions of gallons of treated sewage goes to the bay. This is just the tip of the iceberg on pollution from the Bay Area. In my opinion. running 40% unimpaired flows down the rivers to the Bay-Delta is just a waste of water. The damage to the Bay salmon was only a matter of time. Punishing the foothills and valley by the 40% flow will only empty the lakes and cause financial hardship for a huge amount of people that aren't responsible for the salmon declining. Thanks,Tom VELASQUEZ
