

LATE COMMENT

I believe the only feasible solution is to put water into the lake again, fill it up, then find money to desalinate and get a supply of water.

This body of water could revitalize this whole area, create jobs, recreation, tourism, etc, not to mention be the paramount right of way for the beautiful migratory wildlife.

I believe the many proposals for bio fuel etc are embarrassingly inept.

The State government is leading from the rear. More and more people are coming in for a dwindling supply of water. This means that controls should be put on housing starts. It is like school, it is where things start.

Twenty years of studies, millions of dollars of studies, then those academics want more millions to study the studies. Enough already. The taxpayers want answers and action and not constant talk and inactivity. In the 20 years we could have built an empire, yet not one simple plan to save this gem and refuge. If the name was Tahoe, the muck de mucks would be tripping all over their mouths to get something done, as it was not long ago. Because the people are poorer, no one is in a hurry to do anything and the politicians are busy chasing moonbeams and donors/lobbyists.

Could someone please inform me who is in charge of the $450 million from the $7 billion water project in the last election, earmarked for the Salton Sea Reclamation, so it says. Not one thimbleful of water goes into the lake but it is called a Reclamation of a Sea. That is just a fraudulent shame. I have contacted the governor, Sec of State, Treasurer, Salton Sea Authority, yet not one state entity seems to know where the money is. Imagine, $7 billion and not one political office knows where it is. Incredible what tax payers have to contend with.
