Subject: please extend comment period

I only found out today that the comment period on the water conservation framework was closed as of yesterday at noon. As a resident of California, I want a chance to comment and feel many others would too if given adequate notice.

How and when was comment solicited? Shouldn't that have been widely advertised to give as many people as possible a chance to speak about something that will affect their lives so severely?

Yes, absolutely, the number of tiers should be increased to provide further refinement of the tiers of required water reduction. From what I've read, even the most egregious water hogs will still be allowed somewhere between 3 and 4 times as much water as residents who have diligently reduced their usage for years under the currently proposed tiers.

Please do everything possible to administer this emergency situation with as much equity as can be achieved. Don't punish those who have tried so hard to conserve; consider giving everyone a set amount, not a percentage of past use which in practice rewards water wasters yet again (in my area we've already been through two enforced reductions over the years, both based on prior usage - it's unfair).

Sincerely,

California resident and concerned citizen
