

Ted Johnson

Ted Johnson is the Chief Hydrogeologist at the Water Replenishment District of Southern California. He manages a team of scientists and engineers focused on projects related to aquifer recharge, overdraft, seawater intrusion, regional groundwater monitoring, recycled water recharge, and groundwater quality.

He has B.S. and M.S. degrees from California State University Fullerton, is a California Professional Geologist and Certified Hydrogeologist, is the Vice President of the Groundwater Resources Association of California, has over 26 years of experience in southern California groundwater investigations, and has published papers and given many presentations on groundwater topics to professional organizations.