Dear Holly,

I sent you public input letters before, but now I have a new story I am following that is very pertinent to your subject.

A woman in Clearlake seeking medical help learned from an out of county doctor that she has Blastocystis, a parasite that can come from drinking water as well as other things, and her daughter has the same symptoms. I am trying to reach officials about this and I may have her medical records soon, maybe tonight, and also her permission to help as a journalist advocate.

I would like a position as investigative reporter for the blue ribbon committee, the gathering of facts. I know Lake County.

The woman voiced concern that her local doctors did not share information with her about her diagnosis.

Internet information regarding this parasite mentions algae, or fecal material.

Is tomorrow your deadline? I wanted to make sure you had this today, and I will know more tomorrow. Joan Moss, [REDACTED]
