Comment Letter: Urban Water Conservation Workshop It is critically important that the current drought regulations be amended to recognize the many past efforts that Southern California has made to provide itself with new drought sustainable sources of water. We taxpayers have spent millions and millions of dollars making improvements in our water infrastructure only to be penalized right along with those areas that have done little to conserve this valuable resource. Our past projects and our most current one (Carlsbad- desalination plant) need to be counted. We have sufficient water here in San Diego county and should NOT be forced to suffer these drastic cutbacks. We are now faced with ENORMOUS water rate increases thru no fault of our own.
