

Water for farmland should be the highest priority for our state water resources and those charged with managing it. The decline in food production as a result of insufficient irrigation water affects all levels of our economy.

Please do not divert water to fish in the San Joaquin Bay-Delta or to other non-agricultural interests.

While our environment and nature are important to everyone, they should not take precedence over the agriculture. Farmers feed California and America and must have sufficient water to do so.

Beverly Kennedy
Modesto, CA