

Let's review CAL AM's record. Over the past thirty years under its various ownerships, CAL AM has persistently ignored increasing loss of storage availability in its system due to aging pipes and loss of reservoir capacity while supporting development. CAL AM's current efforts to intimidate its subscribers through threats of water rationing at increased rates is its latest attempt to circumvent the state's ORDER 95-10. This merely highlights the contradiction inherent to private ownership of a basic human need. Hopefully, it will lead to the realization that our only solution is to assume public ownership of our water supply.
